Headline Hx Hse Price Index - Dec 2006
Released 08:00 05-Jan-07
Number 0198P

Halifax House Price Index

National Index December 2006

All Houses, All Buyers Index (1983=100)

Index (seasonally adjusted)	Monthly Change -	Annual Change 9.9%
602.1	1.0%
Standardised Average Price (seasonally adjusted) £186,035

Key Points

- House prices fell by 1.0% in December. Prices in Q4 were 4.2% higher than in 2006 Q3
- House prices increased by 9.9% in 2006, just above the long-term average of 8% per year
- In Greater London, the average price increased to £287,176 by the end of the year. It is above the inheritance tax threshold (currently £285,000) for the first time. Halifax again calls on the government to commit to linking the IHT threshold to house price inflation.
- The average price in the South West broke through the £200,000 barrier for the first time in 2006 Q4 to £200,931. The 10.5% increase in prices in the South West in 2006 represents recovery following a 1.9% fall in 2005. Similarly, prices in East Anglia also achieved double digit growth (13.0%) after a small fall in prices (-1.0%) in 2005.
- As expected, house price inflation remained modest in northern England in 2006. The North recorded the lowest regional rise during the year (3.1%), the smallest increase in the region since 2000.
- Northern Ireland experienced a 53% increase in its average house prices in 2006, from £128,917 in 2005 Q4 to £196,874 in 2006 Q4. The increase in Northern Ireland was the biggest regional annual gain since 1988 (West Midlands: 60%).
- Continued economic growth, rising employment and an ongoing lack of supply will continue to drive up house prices over the coming months. Higher interest rates, greater pressure on household finances and subdued real earnings growth will, however, constrain housing demand. We expect house prices to increase by 4% in 2007.

Commenting, Martin Ellis, Chief Economist, said:

"House prices fell by 1% in December, but it remains too early to conclude that this indicates a genuine slowdown in the housing market. Overall, prices in the final quarter of 2006 were 4.2% higher than in the previous quarter, marking the strongest quarterly rise since 2004 Q2.

Continued economic growth, rising employment and an ongoing lack of supply will continue to drive up house prices over the coming months. Higher interest rates, greater pressure on household finances and subdued real earnings growth will, however, constrain housing demand. We expect house prices to increase by 4% in 2007."

Northern Ireland and Greater London record the biggest house price increases in 2006 Q4

House prices increased in all regions during the fourth quarter. The biggest price rises were in Northern Ireland (15.9%), Greater London (6.6%) and Wales (5.1%). The smallest increase was in the North (0.9%).

Average residential property price in London now above the IHT threshold.....

In Greater London, the average price increased to £287,176 by the end of 2006. The average price in the capital is now above the inheritance tax threshold (currently £285,000) for the first time. Halifax again calls for the government to raise the IHT threshold to £430,000 to allow for house price inflation over the past 10 years and to commit to linking the threshold to house price inflation in future.

Average price breaks £200,000 barrier in the South West

The average price in the South West broke through the £200,000 barrier for the first time in 2006 Q4 to £200,931. The South West joins London and the South East as the only regions where the average price exceeds £200,000.

Northern Ireland records the biggest regional annual rise since 1988.....

Northern Ireland recorded a 53% increase in its average house prices in 2006, taking the average price from £128,917 in 2005 Q4 to £196,874 in 2006 Q4. The increase in Northern Ireland was the biggest regional annual gain since 1988 (West Midlands: 60%). A strong labour market and high levels of immigration have helped to boost housing demand in Northern Ireland. Additionally, there has been high demand for properties from second homebuyers and buy-to-let investors in Ireland who have been attracted by the relatively low prices in Northern Ireland.

First double digit annual rise in London since 2002.....

East Anglia (13.0%), Scotland (12.5%) and Greater London (12.2%) delivered the largest house price rises in Great Britain during 2006. This was the first double digit annual rise in the capital for four years.

Double digit growth in South West and East Anglia follows modest price falls in 2005.....

The 13.0% rise in East Anglia followed a small fall in prices (-1.0%) in 2005. Similarly, the South West recorded double digit growth (10.5%) in 2006 after a 1.9% decline in prices in 2005.

Smallest regional increase in 2006 in the North.....

The North recorded the smallest regional rise in 2006 (3.1%). This was also the smallest increase in the North since 2000. As expected, house price inflation remained relatively modest in northern England in 2006.

North/south house price divide widens for the first time in four years.....

The north/south house price divide widened slightly in 2006 following successive narrowing in 2003, 2004 and 2005. The average property price in the south¹ was £90,013 higher than its counterpart in the north¹ in 2006 Q4, almost £9,000 bigger than the gap in 2005 Q4.

¹ South defined as London, the South East, the South West and East Anglia. The north defined as the rest of the UK.

Indications that the upturn in activity may be losing momentum.....

There have been some signs that the upturn in housing market may be beginning to lose some momentum. The latest RICS monthly survey reported a sharp drop in the pace of increase in new buyer enquiries in November to the lowest rate since the summer. Newly agreed sales also increased at their slowest pace since April.

Economic fundamentals are sound.....

The housing market is underpinned by a healthy economy with the latest ONS figures confirming that gross domestic product (GDP) increased by 0.7% for the fourth consecutive quarter in 2006 Q3, slightly above the long-term average rate of growth. Household spending growth, however, slowed to 0.4% in Q3 from 0.9% in Q2. Real household disposable income growth also eased, rising by 0.2% in Q3 following a 1.0% increase in Q2.

The number of people in employment continues to rise with a 216,000 increase over the past year to a record 29.0 million in the three months to October, according to the ONS. The number of people in full-time employment, however, fell by 93,000 between the three months to July and the following quarter, suggesting a possible weakening in labour market conditions.

But constraints on demand should cause house price inflation to ease

The two quarter point interest rates rises since last August, together with the possibility of a further increase early in 2007, are expected to cause a greater degree of caution amongst homebuyers. Slower UK economic growth, subdued real earnings growth and greater pressure on household finances due to the substantial increase in utility bills over the past year will also contribute to slower house price inflation. House prices are expected to increase by 4% in 2007.

NOTE: The 9.9% number is the quarterly year-on-year figure. This figure provides a much better picture of underlying trends compared to a monthly year-on-year number as it smoothes out any short-term fluctuations.
